

Philosophy of Education

The educational process in a Christian school is dependent upon a Biblical philosophy that provides the Godly worldview and essential truths for life so that students may be prepared to fulfill their proper places in the home, the church, and the state. Accordingly, the philosophy of education for Resurrection Christian School is as follows:

Our Educational Philosophy is to train young people spiritually, academically, socially, and physically (Luke 2:52). RCS is an extension of the Christian home, where God has given the primary responsibility of educating children to the parents.

Attendance at RCS is a privilege. All students that desire to continue to attend RCS must meet academic and behavioral expectations and desire to grow in Christ.

RCS exists to help young people grow into the fullness of Christ with a strong emphasis on academic training. It should be recognized that RCS has limited resources to effectively meet the needs of children with certain physical handicaps and learning difficulties. In addition, students must have the ability to learn, grow, and mature at appropriate grade levels. Our guiding principles are as follows:

Spiritual

Build a foundation of Biblical principles and values in order to successfully integrate Christian philosophy into the student's total life. Nurture competency in communication and research skills and the ability to make mature decisions.

Academic

Provide quality academic education. Encourage learning the necessary skills required for meaningful participation in society as an adult.

Social

Provide students with opportunities for growth in the social skills required for adequate involvement in today's society. Enable students to adequately understand and appreciate the privileges and responsibilities of living in a democracy.

Physical

Provide opportunities for learning skills necessary to participate in physical activities and a healthy lifestyle. Provide opportunities for participation in individual and team physical activities.
